New Quarters

The survivors of the Israeli delegation have been moved to new quarters in the Olympic VIIlage, pending their departure tomorrow. They have been placed under special guard, but the location of their new quarters has heen kept secret.

Israel's official statement that the Games should go on was interpreted politically. Had the Isracli government asked that the Games be called off the terrorists' mass murder would have accomplished something that only world wars have stopped-the cancellation of the Olympics, sport's most exalted meeting.

During the two-hour ceremony, the Israeli delegation, some dress-ed in blazers, others only in white shirts, some in black suits, but all wearing yamulkas. sat in the four front rows of seats placed on the field. There were no religious speeches, no rabbis. A dozen men, obviously armed, kept constant watch over the Israelis during the ceremony. There were some members of other delegations, including Uru-guay, which shared the Olympic Village building with the Israelis, sitting with them.

The delegation remained seated when the ceremony was over, and many other athletes came to them to offer condolences, Members of the West German team wore hlack armbands.

MUNICH, Sept. 6 (IHT).—Chancellor Willy Brandt's government today ordered a full-scale investigation of the Olympics massacre, which ended early this morning with the death of 17 persons -11 Israeli team members, a West German policeman and five Arab guerrillas. Three more terrorists were captured at the airport shootout scene. At a special cabinet session held immediately after Mr. Brandt returned to Bonn from an Olympics memorial service for the 11 Israelis, it was also decided to ask the United Nations to give priority to a discussion of measures to halt terrorist acts.

Conrad Ahlers, chief government spokesman, said the Bonn regime's investigation would seek to determine "what steps were taken . . . and whether any errors were made" in West Germany's handling of the affair.

European Economic Community countries will also be asked to decide on joint action to prevent terrorism, he said. Mr. Ahlers said he does not believe the Munich killings "will have serious consequences our developing relations with Arab countries." On the other hand, he said, "It cannot be denied that these actions must go down on the account of the Arab nations."

"Will Do Its Ulmost" Mr. Brandt said today that his Social Democratic Party "will do its ulmost to help see to it that governments of the Arab world which so far had tolerated or acquiesced to the activities of terrorists are unmistakably about their responsibility their negligence as well as all the censequences involved."

The 20-hour reign of terror by suicidal Arab guerrillas ended with machine-gun bullets, exploding grenades and a burned-out helicopter very early this morn-

All 11 of the Israelis, who had been captured at gunpoint by the stocking-masked terrorists after the ominous predawn knock on the door of the Israeli marters in Building 31, were dead.

Two Israelis, who shouted warnings to their comrades to flee and thus enabled many to escape by jumping out of windows, were killed in the predawn yesterday. They were Moshe Weinberg, 33, a wrestling coach, whose bulletriddled body was found outside the apartment at 6 am., and Yosef Romano, 32, middleweight weightlifter whose death was reported hours later.

All through the day, as Munich's police chief, later West Germany's minister of the interior and Chancellor Brandt took charge of the negotiations with the Arabs, they held nine nostages. At 5 pm. Chancellor Brandt addressed the world on TV, telling how all his offers were spurned—safe exit from the countr: and German politicians offering to excharge themselves for the hostages. tragedy went beyond those who perpetrated the crime,

"There is a greater and weightler responsibility—that of those Arab countries where the [guerrilla] organizations receive encouragement support financing, training and shelter," Mr. Eban told an interviewer on the Israeli radio

Asked if Israel would draw "operative conclusions" from this responsibility, he replied: "We have always acted in accordance with such conclusions. Our political, as well other type of activity, has been directed at the roots of the evil.

"I cannot at this stage—when our dead lie before us refer to an operative conclusion arising from the tragedy."

Mr. Eban made it clear that the Israeli government approved of the West German government's decision to use force against the guerrillas.

He said anybody who studied Israel's policy must be aware that Israel decided at a very early stage not to negotiate with guerrille blackmailers.

"What happened was that the German Federal Republic's govrnment made a sovereign decision to use force in order to rescue the hostages to prevent terrorism from securing its aims." Mr. Foan said Israel appreciated the West German govern-ment's basic decision. But he added: "The tragedy is that in this first time when another country uses force against Arab guerrillas it failed to secure the desired result."

Israel officially called on world governments to take more ef-lective action against Arab guerafter a three-and-a-half-hour special cabinet session also announced that the victims would be given a state funeral. The communiqué said the goveroment condemned with anger and diagnot the murders carried out by the Arab terrorists. Call to Governments "This bloody attack, which proves the criminal nature of the Arab terrorist organizations, presents a danger not only for Israel but to the peoples of all nations," it said. "Israel will persevere in its war against the terrorist organizations and will not absolve those aiding them from responsibility for the acts of the terrorists," it said. The Israeli government will call on governments and political bodies and demand that efficient steps be taken against the cells and branches of the terrorist organisations, with the aim of par-alyzing their activities." As messages of sympathy from heads of state flowed in to President Zalman Shazar, many Israelis commented bitterly that it was not condolences which were needed, but firm reprisals.

The shock and disgust expresspremature jubilation and relief felt late last night at the incorrect reports that the hostages had been freed safe.

Israel radio, which operated all night, did not announce the deaths until more than two bours after the first flash was received. As the news spread there were scenes of deep emotion and raging anger.

Feeling of Disgust But above all the prevailing feeling was disgust-disgust at what was seen here as the masof unarmed civilians, disgust at the case with which Arab guerrillas could roam around Europe carrying out attacks, disgust at the Arab countries which harbor the guerrillas.

There was also a feeling among the general public that the German security forces had bungled the rescue operation.

"I suppose they did the best they could. How good their best was we have seen," said former air force chief Ezer Weizman. Meanwhile, Interior Minister Josef Burg said at a rally of 2.000 schoolchildren that 'I won't argue with the decision to continne the Games or land that is soaked with blood." What Olympian peace of mind it must have to make this decision," he added. "Let them play the Games. We

He called these nations the "real murderers. unless they change their attitude and minds in today's world." Mr. Heinemann saft: "The Olympic ideal is not contradicted by what happened here; we owe it more today than ever before." and he said that the tragedy would move men to seek peace. The West German president made a plea to all people of the vorid to re for reconciliation, a plea heard after the assassination of resident John F. Kennedy and that of Dr. Martin Luther King.

Mr. Brundage again raged against a theme which had almost halted these Games before they started—the Rhodesian issue. The 84-year-old retiring president noted "the Rhodesian battle against naked political blackmail." Rhodesia had been banned from the Games because blacks had threatened a boycott.

the 'All Dead' Report fence. A television camera from the TV tower about half a mile away peered into the area. Since no reporters were offi-cially present at the village, no information was passed out there. Hans Klein, press chief for Manich's Olympic organising com-mittee, was delegated to make the official tall ormematis, from information relayed by police.

Mr. Riem held six news conferences in the big ground floor essembly area of the mess cen-ter, crowded with reporters.

Manfred Schreiber chief of the Munich police, faced the news-men at the press center at I p.m., shout eight hours after the alege started. But he had no secu-rate figures on how many hostages were held, or how many terrorists were involved. He said one body had been removed. He refused to answer questions, saying the terrorists were monitor-ing male and television reports. In Jerusalem, the Israeli government was saying two were dead. Munich officials stuck to the figure of one, changed to two, then went back to one. Jerusalem finally announced the name of the second dead man, but an hour later Mr. Riem stuck to one. Ten minutes later he changed it to two.

The reason the officials stuck to one dead was that only one body had been recovered and they were hoping the other man might somebow have survived.

Shostout Expected

One reporter at an area in the village where police were getting orders was told there would be a shootout at 5 pm. As the 5 p.m. deadline approached, television monitors for different networks went blank, one by one. Everyone waited tensely, but there was no shootout.

A belicopter landing pad had been roped off at Connolly Platz in the village, near the Israeli quarters. But when the terrorists and hostages came out of the building at 10 p.m., they were taken to another landing area, 2 few hundred yards away.

Newsmen had waited at the Riem airport all day waiting for the terrorists possible departure by plane. But the plane had been prepared at the Fuerstenfeldbruck airport, which reporters could not enter.

Mr. Klein constantly relayed information-not all of it accurate -on the shooting climax at the airport. He said he was getting information from a colleague at the airport, and perhaps from several police sources.

The German radio announced: all hostages were safe, and Mr Klein quickly confirmed it. About 90 minutes later, he said an officer at the airport reported that shooting was continuing, and that information from the airport was contradictory and con-

"Too Optimistic"

About 30 minutes later he reappeared to say, "We are afraid the information given so far is too optimistic." He said that one policeman and three terrorists the hostages was not known. Still later, he said that a helicopter had been set affre.

Finally, German government officials said that all hostages died. This was four hours after the hostages left the village, and three hours after the announcement that they were safe

The officials then gave a chronological rundown of the tragedy piece by piece in three languages German, English and Frenchthus withholding until the last possible minute the answer to the key question at that time: All the hostages were dead.

One of the more mystifying spects of the entire affair was cicared up somewhat today when Conrad Ahlers, the chief govern-ment spokesman, explained why he appeared on television at 12:30 a.m. and reported that "all hostages are safe and free."

Mr. Ahlers explained that state police had notified Chancellor Willy Brandt that the hostages were safe so he released the statement to the public.

But nther felsifications of facts such as the report from another state policeman that Arabs had been found wounded in the Israeli complex, remain unexplained.

An Olympic press officer said his office was unable to supply any of the answers since it was the responsibility of the office of the Bayarian Minister for Interior Affairs, Otto Merk.

'Impossible to Get'

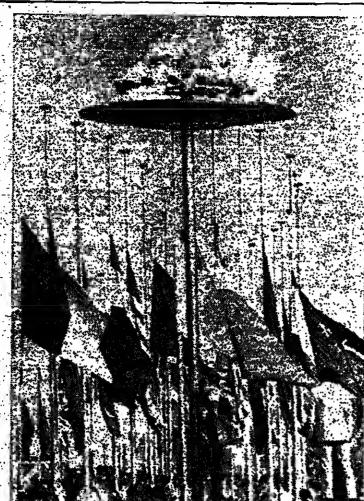

"It is impossible to get all the answers today. It is too diffi-cult," said the press officer. "It would be too dangerous to give out information because not everything is yet clear, "The minister for interior affairs will release a statement tomorrow morning explaining the full details."

One of the mysteries that hopefully will be cleared up is who fired the first shot at the airport. The blame was being shifted about long speech by Mr. Merk to ask how many hostages had been in-volved, that the total was fixed

During his news conference, Mr. Merk said: "The guerrillas, in agreement with their hostages, decided to fly to Cairo. This would have meant certain death to the hostages. Our aim was to have the sharpshootere shoot the guerrillas out of action at the airport, but this was extremely difficult because they used the pilots as additional hostages and kept them waiting outside the helicopters while one of them, apparently the leader, inspected the Lufthansa jetliner. "Second, it was dark, and although we had illuminated the whole area with searchlights, the choppers and other objects on the airfield caused shadows. The sharpshooters could not out all the guerrillas out of action. The unhurt immediately opened a burst of machine-gun fire against two helicopters and the air base. ## Iceland Bars U.K. Protest In Cod War

Says It Will Protect Its New 50-Mile Limit

REYKJAVIK, Sept. 6 (Reuters).—Foreign Minister Einer Agustsson tonight rejected a British protest over the cutting of trawl lines of a fishing vessel from Hull, England, saying Iceland "reserves the right to protect its new 50-mile limit."

At the same time, the Icelandic Coast Guard threatened to cut the lines of other foreign trawlers found in the contested waters. Mr. Agustsson was replying to a verbal protest that British Am-bassador John McKenzie made yesterday after the incident involving the gunboat Aegir and Mr. McKenzie said the action was dangerous to men's lives and likely to incite the trawlermen. Mr. Agustsson called the ambassador to his office today and told him that the Icelandic government had avoided inciting or provoking the British trawlermen. But, he said, Iceland must defend its exclusive fishing waters, expanded last Friday to 50 miles offshore.

Referring to yesterday's inci-dent, the minister said that the attacked trawler had sailed with-out a national flag and with its name and registration number hlotted out.

Later, Mr. Agustsson was asked whether his remarks meant that only unmarked and unidentified trawlers would be attacked with line-cutting. He refused to comment directly and said that that must be decided according to circumstances. But he pointed out that the Icelandic government had shown its willingness to keep the dispute "cool" by not having foreign trawlers boarded.

Meanwhile, Iceland's opposition leader, Johann Hafstein, chairman of the rightist Independence party-the country's biggestcalled on the government today to take the initiative to begin new talks with Britain to solve the dispute "before serious aecidents happen"

The bomb was the fourth touched off in less than 24 hours. That period overlapped with one in which reports were widespread that the outlawed Irish Republican Army's militant Provisional wing was considering calling off its bombing campaign,

The less extreme Official wing the IRA had urged the Provisionals to do so last week Sources close to the Provisionals said the bombing might be halted in advance of a political conference on Northern Ireland's future, a parley scheduled for Sept. 35-27 somewhere in Britain

A spokesman for the Provisionals said last night that "so far we are concerned there has heen no change of policy. However, we are at the moment conscious of the need to reconcile this objective with the elimination of risk to human life."

Bar Demolished

The homb exploded outside a pub frequented by Catholics shortly after the bar had closed for the night. The blast de-molished the building but caused no casualties, the army said.

An attack with a "spigot bomb" on explosive charge on a stick fired from a shotgun-narrowly missed spastie and paraplegic patients et Royal Victoria Hospital here this afternoon, a British Army spokesman said.

The bomb-"a type that is wildly inaccurate," according to the spokesman-was fired et British soldiers in the bospital grounds hut exploded in an area emptied only minutes earlier of spastle and paraplegie patients. The soldiers were unhurt.

Protestant Bombs Suspected Meanwhile, speculation that militant Protestants might have started a bombing campaign increased bere today. Until recently every bomf blast in the province was blamed on the Provisional IRA. But several blasts in the las two weeks bave been aimed at targets in Catholic areas

Last night there was an explosion in Belfast between Keenan's Bar, a well-known gathering place for militant Republicans, and the Orchid Lounge, whose clientele is almost 100 percent Catholic. Two days ago the British Army discovered a bomh planted outside the headquarters of the Social Democratic and Labor party, the main Catholic party in Northern Ireland. Military bomb experts detonated the explosives and little damage was caused.

On Aug. 26 e bomh exploded at a Catholic church in the seaside resort of Donaghadee, east of Belfast, injuring six people.

Maneuvers Expected In Czechoslovakia

PRAGUE, Sept. 6 (Routers).— Rude Pravo today said that the forthcoming Warsaw Pact maneuvers in Czechoslovakia have been code-named "Shield 72" to symbolize the Socialist countries defense against the aggressive aims of imperialism.

The Communist-party news-paper hinted that the maneuvers would be as large as previous exercises in which about 100,000 troops took part.

The only official word on the date of the exercises has been "this autumn" but the publication of today's comment indicates they may begin in the next few days would extend through San Francisco and Marin County areas. He made tour by ferry.

Says His Bills Are 'Mired in Inaction'

"We cannot afford to allow our priceless national heritage to become a hostage to partisanship," he declared. 'Restoring and protecting the environment is not a Democratic or Republican issue. All Americans recognize the importance of this endeavor."

"To the American people," he went on, "I pledge that the pres-sures of this political season will in no way diminish my administration's sense of urgency in environmental action. But the Congress must also fulfill its part of the partnership."

Along with the President's statement, the White House press office released a number of fact. sbeets and announcements, detailing the legislative proposals still languishing on Capitol Hill and describing executive actions to enlarge public recreation areas property to cities and towns.

TUC in Britain Votes Opposition To Joining EEC

BRIGHTON, England, Sept. 6 (Reuters).-In an apparent major policy shift. Britain's powerful Frades Union Congress today voted to oppose on principle Brit-ish membership in the European Economic Community.

The TUC annual conference here approved a resolution calling for repeal of the European Communities bill-under which Britain is to join the Common Market on Jan. 1-and a vigorous campaign for withdrawal from the community.

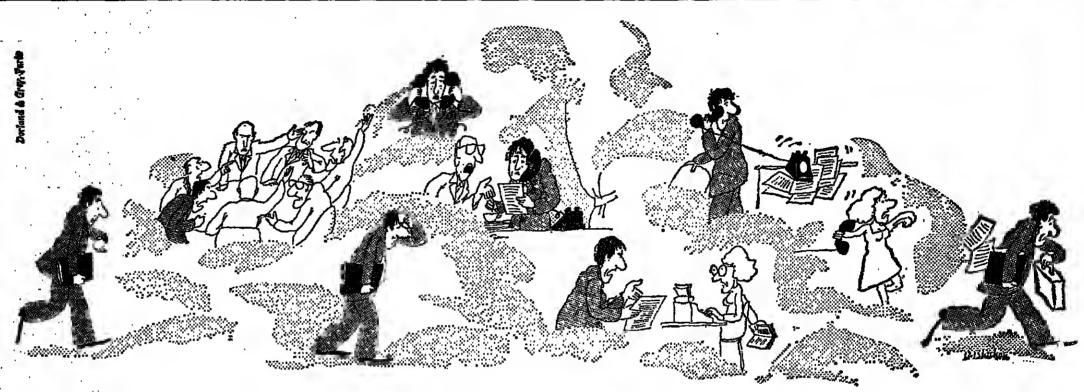

The TUC, representing some 10 million workers, has previously followed the Labor party's line of opposing entry on the terms negotlated by Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath.

But the TUC's newly elected Executive Council was left with an ambiguous situation today since the conference approved not only this resolution but also another which simply condemned entry "on terms which are a surrender of the right to determine freely independent social policies."

The commentary added little to the mystery of Marshal Idn's death last September in an air erash in Mongolia, when, Peking contends, he was flecing to the Soviet Union after an abortive coup attempt against Mr. Mao. What evidently irked the Russians most was a Hung Chi article saying there was an "international background" to Marshal Lin's conspiracies and asserting that revisionists and opportunists in the Chinese Communist party invariably sought hacking from "imperialism and social imperialism"-code words for the United States and the Soviet Union-as well as leaks, to two members of the Japanese parliament, that Marshal Lin had been in close communication with former Soviet Defense Minister Rodion Malinovsky, who died in 1967.

2 Years After Full Role in War

Cambodian Army Still Not Effective Force

By Thomas W. Lippman

PHNOM PENH, Sept. 5 (WP). -Two years after it first confronted the reality of modern warfare, the army of Cambodia remains a poorly trained and illequipped organization unable to se the initiative in its struggle against North Vietnam

Cambodian officials, ordinary soldiers and foreign analysts interviewed here agreed that corruption, inefficiency and political interference, combined with continning pressure from the Communists, have hir lered the army's development into an effective fighting force and may have prevented it altogether.

There is also a widespread feeling that this is a war Cambodia matter what the army achieves and that the country is at the mercy of international forces it cannot control. Under those circumstances, it is difficult to sustain the army's morale.

Even Chang Song, the spokes-man for the army high command, wrote the other day that "the Khmer republic is locked in a battle in which it has all to lose and nothing to gain."

Although it is accepted by military and diplomatic sources here that the North Vietnamese have no intention of trying to capture Phnom Penh, it is also agreed that they can do pretty much what they went in the rest

Highways Cut . Six of the seven principal highways linking Phnom Penh with the provinces are cut, at ranging from 25 about 100 miles from the capital. On one of them, Highway 5, Communist troops have blown up two bridges and seized control of the road at three other places, cutrice supplies in Battambang province. The seventh major highway, Route 4 to the seaport of empong Som, is open only to military convoys. Phnom Penh lives with the nightly rumble of artillery. The countryside looks more and more like Vietnam, dotted with ruined towns, shattered bridges and shandoned farms, Except for the capital and its environs, already heavily attacked by rockets once this year, and the province of Battambang to the northwest, Communist troops bold or are threatening most of the country. Almost everythin; north and east of a line formed by High-ways 6 and 7 remains in North Vietnames: hands and there is no prospect that Cambodians can get any of it back on their own.

In what some sources viewed as an effort to discourage participation in last Sunday's national assembly elections, t' ? estimated 43,000 North Vietnamese troops and 30,000 local Khmer Rouge, or guerrillas, have staged a new round of heavy attacks in central and southeastern Cambodia for the past month, The army has had its hands more than full cop-

Disastrons Offensive

A major counteroffensive last December in an attempt to clear Highway 6 and link up with the town of Kompong Thom ended in disaster, and no more such efforts are likely. The army's role is now entirely defensive and even in that task it has relied heavily on South Vietnamese and U.S. support.

"In my 18 months here." a Western military analyst said in an interview, "I have seen no situation where the Cambodians bodian Army has come a long way from the 32,000-man force that existed when Prince Norodom Sihanonk was overthrown and war with North Vietnam erupted in 1970. It was as Chang Song put it, "a parade-ground army" that was "obsolete, underaized and eccentrically equipped." Authoritative figures on the current strength of the army are hard to obtain. The Cambodians put it at 200,000 and increasing. The gloomiest Western analysts a year ago and has now dropped to about 125,000. The Americans use a figure of 170,000. At the start of the war, the army was equipped with some Chinese weapons and a grab-bag of leftover French, British and American weapons from World War II. As its early bettles with the North Vietnamese showed, 15 deserved its reputation as a "show army" unprepared for fighting. Over the past two years, the United States has supplied most of the soldiers with 16-mm rifles and has set a goal of making the army a fully-equipped light in-

say it peaked at less than that fautry. That means no heavy artillery and no tanks but all the other accourrements of modern warfare: mortars, grenades, communication equipment, automatic weapons and anti-tank

The United States has also tried to set up the army's first real training program, although members of the U.S. team here are barred from participating in any such exercise and the training is done abroad,

Besides lack of training, absence of administrative talent ns with many recruitment, there are primitive logistical support and living con-

The soldiers' families live with them in the field. "You can imagine what that means when the enemy artillery starts coming in," one analyst said. Since neither living quarters nor food are provided, the soldiers and their families spend a lot of their time constructing huts and foraging for food.

Diversionary Attack Some officers in the field said they believed the heavy artillery and ground assault on the hilltop outpost was a diversionary attack to draw South Vietnamese forces away from an operation aimed at securing the Que Son Valley, the route to Da Nang and Highway 1.

Field reports said the South Vietnamese put up a battle for Hill 211 before being pushed back, losing two 105-mm howitzers to the enemy.

The South Vietnamese were reported to have sent in reinforcements, landing about 200 government troops about a mile south of the hill. Two helicopters ferrying in troops were shot down and one South Vietnamese was killed and 16 were wounded, the field reports said.

More than 100 miles to the north, South Vietnamese marines continued a slow and costly drive to root out North Vietnamese troops entrenched in a large bunker complex in the southern part of Quang Tri. The battle remained a standoff after its 71st day.

On the southern front, field reports said South Vietnamese infantrymen had seized the southern sector of the Quan Loi airfield in rubber plantations east of An Loc, which fell to the North Vietnamese last April. The region is 60 miles north of Sai-

Solzhenitsyn Novel Heads List of Books in U.S.

By Eric Pace

NEW YORK (NYT)—New dust jackets are popping up in the bookstores. Authors are sprucing up for their TV appearances. Glasses are clinking at the Italian Pavilion restaurant here and at other editors' haunts. And trailer trucks are lugging mounaround the United States.

All this indicates that the fall publishing season is upon us. And, interestingly enough, despite all the talk of the decline of ficbook among publishers is a novel: Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn's "August 1914," which Farrar, Straus Giroux is bringing out on Page 8- Thursday, September 7, 1972 *

That Arab fanatics could engage in indiscrimate murder, kidnaoping and aeriai hijacking was proved long ago. But the murderous assault in Munich ; lumbeo new depths of criminality. By choosing the Olympic Games as the occasion for their bloody foray, the Arab terrorists made it plain that their real target was civilized conduct among nations, not merely Israel or the Israeli athletes that they killed. If the Olympic Games could provide a setting for release of their homicidal hatreds, then the same threat would hang over every United Nations meeting and all other international gatherings cailed to promote peace and friendship among nations.

The action of the West German authorities in refusing to let the terrorists fly out with their hostages became a tragic necessity after Egypt had rejected an appeal from Chancellor Brandt for guarantees that the captive athletes would be returned. The cost in casualties was horrendous, but the desperate gambie to free the Israelis and to make unthinkable any repetition of such outrages was undertaken only after the West Germans offered ransom and substitute hostages to save the lives of the hapless captives.

Toe sympathy of the civilized world goes out to the families of the victims as well as to the nation that was the immediate object of this heinous plot. It was particuiarly bronic that this bizarre event in which Jewish lives were again sacrificed took place in West Germany, host to the first Olympic Games on German soil since Hitler presided over the 1936 competition in Berlin. In the wake of this mass tragedy, it is a desecration of everything for which the Games supposedly stand to continue the 1972 contests. The most fitting expression of giobal revulsion at the monstrous crime of the Arab terrorists would have been cancellation of the rest of the schedule.

A central question behind the outrage is who backs the small handful of Arab fanatics immediately involved Who encourages and finances them? Who offers them safe havens for plotting their murderous deeds and their escape? The answers are not far to seek. These criminals have much sympathy in Arab nations. Often in the past, responsible Arab officials in different countries have had only praise for particular acts of terrorism. It surprised no one that a communique of the Munich terrorists was candestinely distributed in Cairo on the day of the killings, for Egyptian officials have applauded similar outrages before, notably the massacre at Lydda International Airport on May 30. The primary responsibility for ending these crimes is that of the Arab states. Never has that responsibility heen more clear-cut.

In the Middle East itself, the dreadful attack on the Israelis at the Olympics must represent a further setback to the search for a negotiated settlement and a lasting peace, and certainly does irreparable harm to the cause of the Palestinians in whose name such atrocitles are perpetrated.

The primary challenge of the Munich crimes is to the international community. The fundamental issue is whether there can be effective common action against fanatics and criminals who recognize no boundaries or limits to their depredations. Any nation willing to tolerate or condone such outrages by word or deed deserves ontlawry hy the civilized world.

International Opinion Carnage at the Olympic Games

Now is the time to settle the score, in principles of understanding among nations blood, with the saboteurs and those who sent them. Recriminations over Olympic security and West Germany's rescue efforts must wait until revenge is taken. We will not follow the terrorist methods and strike from a distance—we will hit them in their home. We want not only justice and vengeance, but to cut off the arm that threatens us. The 11 who died have begun a new era . . , an era of liquidating the guerrillas.

-From Ma'ariv (Tel Avit).

Public opinion has always been against the Arabs, so public opinion needs a sharp blow to become impartial.

-From Al-Mohorrer (Beirut).

Blocked in their endeavors to attain justice peaceably, Palastinians see no other means than the methods which have been used against them. Disdaining death, they have not hesitated to attack the enemy whenever and wherever they are, even in Tel Aviv itself. The attack in Munich was hut one of a series. The world may call these crimes but must expect them to continue until the Palestinians' rights are restored.

-From the Egyption Gazette (Cairo). * * *

The much-vaunted Olympic ideal may have always been a lovely illusion, which quickly dissipated when confronted with reality. It is in the nature of an event which exercises such fascination on the masses that it cannot take place in a total political vacuum. But it is nevertheless shattering to see how a handful of grim desperadoes can disrupt such a theoretically peaceful event and how the world can only look in hitter powerlessness. Cnce again these isolaten fanatics have done a grave disservice to their own cause. Aside from their innocent victims, the crime redounds against the criminals.

-- From Neue Zuercher Zeilung (Zurich). * * *

The mind fairly boggies at the frightful deeds of the terrorist Black September movement, which in a short space of time assassinated the premier of Jordan, hijacked a Belgian airliner and disrupted the Olympic Games after a bloody raid on the quarters of Israeli athletes. That kind of terror casually compounded has no rationale and knows no restraint. It cannot go unbridled or it will endanger the peace of the world. fust as it so incredibly called a halt to an athletic event which for decades has brought young people the world over into brotherly competition.

It is known that the German Democratic Republic stands on the side of the Arab states against Israeli aggression and supports a political solution of the conflict on the basis of the resolution of the Security Council. Terror acts like those in Munich obviously cannot serve the cause of a peaceful solution or contribute to the evacuation by Israel of occupied Arab territory.

The vessel grounded in the Strait of Messina, when a large number of the natives came alongside in small boats with the object of plundering her. They were fortunately driven off by some Italian torpedo boats before they could do any damage. But it was a fright for the possengers and crew.

Olympic Tragedy: A Madness in the World

at the Olympic Games is just the latest reminder that there is now a kind of madness in the world, a lunatic strain of anarchy that hinders the peace and order of mankind.

The psradox of contemporary history is fairly plain: At one and the same time, there are hopeful signs that the majority of the human race is just beginning to see that the progress of man requires the cooperation of men and women of all nations. but still the majority exists with the tyranny of the minority.

The present history of American presidential politics has been influenced, if not determined, by deranged minds. One man takes the life of John Kennedy, another the life of his brother Robert, a third silences the voice of Martin Luther King, a fourth changes the course of the 1973 American election by putting a bullet in the spine of George Wallace, and every commercial airplane is at the mercy. if that is the word of any tormented skyjacker across the aisle.

The Problem

The problem is not that mankind is incorrigibly villainous, or that It is indifferent to this in iguitous and ruinous slaughtering and murdering, but that the majority has not been able to devise ways of controlling the maniacal and even nonsensical acts of deranged agitators and dunderheads.

The philosophers, politicians and statesmen have all tried to deal with what is obviously an inlouitous and ruinous problem. without success. Even the Soviet Union, which puts more stress on order than any other society in the world, has just refused to go along with an international couvention that would require all signatory nations to suspend their service with any other nation that did not punish or extradite airplane hijackers or saboteurs.

So maybe we have to turn to the scientists for relief, or at least for some help, in minimizing the power of the mad minority. Shortly after the murder of President Kennedy, a few scientists did come forward and surgest to the government in Washogton that the problem of protecting Presidents as well as spotting guns and bombs at airports or in political rallies or any

This idea was proposed during the Warren Commission inquiry into the Kennedy assessination. Later, the Rand Corp. urged experimentation with this notion on May 5, 1966. It was repeatedly brought up during the congressional hearings on gun control since then, but very little has been done to bring the ammunition - seeding proposal into operation.

Obvious Difficulties

There are obvious difficulties. There are now over 90 million firearms in the United States over one and a half per family. The number of handgums was increasing, until the recent legisiation against "Saturday Night Specials," at an alarming rate, more than 2.5 million a year.

Nevertheless, any preventive innovation, no matter how imperfect, is worth trying to deal with the political anarchy that tilled the Kennedys, Martin Luther King, and the Israelis at the Olympic Games. The seeding of ammunition with radioactive isotopes would probably not have picked up Jack Kennedy's assassin with his long-range gun, but would have spotted Robert Kennedy's assassin in that Los Angeles botel, and the man who shot Wallace in Maryland. There is very little evidence that any of these potential assassins is especially intelligent. They buy their guns and ammunition where they can get them, which is usually at the local sporting goods or hardware store, and even the knowledge that radio-

Rebutting Powell

With all due respects to Justice Lewis F. Powell fr. of the United States Supreme Court, I feel compelled to comment upon his address to the American Bar Association (IHT, Sept. 2).

A number of questions of fact needed to be put against the questions of Justice Powen's imagination. When was there ever an age free from religious strife? When was there an age ever tree from the difficulties inherent in town or city life? One need only return to some historical facts about the United States: Did everyone in 1776 have a respect for law or did they disobey laws "... believed by the individual to be unjust"? When was sexual morality ever a settled concept for any religious person? Was it for John Milton, in regard to divorce or to the early Manichaesns or Gnostics?

Justice Powell thinks that too much self-destructive criticism is now loose in society. Would he feel the criticism of the Vice-President of the United States against college students to be an excessively self-destructive criticism? Would he have felt that the upinlons of Miranda or Escobedo were excessively critical of the accepted criminal-social practices of the law? Or would the court recent decisions in Furmen, Jackson, and Branch, holding that the death penalty constitutes a cruel and unusual punishment in violetion of the 8th and 14th Amendments, be yet an example of "excessive selfflagellation"?

What is absent from Justice Powell's learned address is any sense of realism. "Piddler on the Roof" is an utterly absurd position from which to judge real social issues. What is apparent to me must be this conclusion: that much of the social turmoil in the United States might be an expression of the distrust age metaphors. People want the government to govern; but to govern first at home, and that means to repair decaying cities. to reform an inequitable medical system, to stop the cruel and costly charity of needless foreign wars, and to come back down to

It set out a few ways of doing it, but any of the methods would increase not only the power of the international community of nations, but of the TMF itself.

On the question of the settle-ment of imbalances, the report suggests as one option that "any new system should be one in which the surpluses and deficits of the reserve centers. are sattled in reserve assets or by means of credit operations..." At that point in the 57-page report, "another view," clearly that of the U.S. Treasury, is ont-lined, arguing that "there is no precedent for a regulated asset settlement system," and warning that "if rigidly adhered to, [it] might contain a deflationary bias." The "search for possible alternative approaches" should be continued according to this

But the report proceeds from there to consider only different approaches to an SDR system. It proposes three main ways in which the dollar could be phased out (by degrees, if necessary) in favor of SDRs:

The United States would settle its deficits by transferring gold and SDRs to countries which hold dollar balances. It would get SDRs as needed, by buying them from an expanded IMF facility.

• A country would agree not to let its holdings of dollars (or other reserve currency) vary from a previously set level. Anything over that would be turned back • Relying more on voluntary than mandatory rules, members

Technically, the report is in response to a resolution adopted by the board of governors at the last IMP meeting, following soon after President Nixon's dramatic actions of Aug. 15, 1971, breaking the link between the dollar and gold. This called for an analysis of measures that could improve or reform the monetary system.

In the meantime, the IMP has designated a "committee of 20" to study general reform problems, its current-account payments sur-plus to 1 percent of the country's gross national product by 1975, and this will be Japan's basic position at this month's international monetary conferences.

EEC Probes Car Makers' Trade Terms

BRUSSELS, Sept. 8 (AP-DJ) The Common Market commission's anti-trust department has stepped up its investigation into the automobile industry's practice of forbidding dealers from re-exporting vehicles purchased from a foreign maker. A commission official confirmed today that the EEC has sent formal complaints to a number of automobile manufacturers, contending that the practice violates free-competition rules.

The official declined to name any of the firms involved, but they are believed to include most of the large European makers, A copy of the complaint sent to Citroen of France was recently published in a West German law journal

The commission's view is that hans on re-exporting tend to maintain the price differences for the same car in the various EEC countries, differences that cannot be fully explained by varying tax

The bens on re-exporting are generally contained in the exclusive distributorship agreements that automakers sign with dealers. The commission believes that exclusive agreements can be justified on the ground that large stocks of parts must be maintained for servicing, but it wants to encourage free trading and uni form pricing by eliminating the bans on re-exporting.

A study published by the EEC last week found that dealers in West German and Italian antos were selling cars in France and the Netherlands at prices up to 10 percent below those in the manufacturers' home markets. French cars sometimes cost 15 percent more in West Germany and Italy than in France.

The commission's investigation has been going on for some time and the formal complaints were sent out earlier this summer. France's Peugeot and West Germany's Bayerische Motorenwerke have previously been cited as being involved in the investiga-

Under EEC rules, companies may reply to complaints made against them before the commission takes a decision on whether to levy fines or compel an end to prohibited practices.

TOKYO, Sept. 6 (AP-DJ).— Tanaka at last weekend's summits conference with President nits current-account payments surther idea originated from a joint meeting of official; of the Trade. Finance and Economic Planning

Ministries. Mr. Komatsu said this plan, which does not provide for any interim payments or trade balance targets, will be reiterated by Japanese delegates at a meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development's Working Party Three, scheduled to be held in Parts Sept. 14-15.

The plan will also be presented at the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund later this month and at subsequent international conferences,

The Working Party Three meet-ing is expected to focus on the problem of what might constitute reasonable current-account payments positions for major nations. The current account comprises earnings from trade, courism and "invisibles." Japan's GNP totaled 81,141.9

hillion yen, or $242.9 hillion at an average exchange mte of 3345 yen to the dollar in the year ended March 31, 1972. The country ran a current-account payments surplus of $6.3 billion that year, equivalent to 2.8 percent of

Mr. Komatsu said the Trade Ministry expects the GNP to grow at an average rate of 10 percent a year at 1971 prices dur. ing the next four years, putting it in fiscal 1975 near 118,000 billion yen, or about $395 billion. On this basis, the current-acccunt payments' surplus target would be close to $4 hillion. Mr. Komatsu said it is estimated that Japan's deficit on invisibles will widen to $2.8 hillion to $3 billion in fiscal 1975 from $2.1 billion in fiscal 1971. This means the country would run a merchandise trade surplus of about 56.8 hillion in 1975 and still reach the I percent currentaccount surplus target Japan's trade surplus in latest year totaled $8.4 billion and it is running at an annual rate of nearly $9 billion so far this fiscal year. Mr. Komatsu said the 1 percent target was decided upon hecause Japan has pledged to in-crease its aid to developing countries to 1 percent of GNP.

Japan to Provide $170-Million Loan To South Korea

SEOUL, Sept. 6 (AP) .- Japan agreed to provide $170 million in long-term yen loans to help finance South Korean development projects at the sixth annual Japan-Korea ministerial conference which ended here

A joint communique said that the loans comprise 580 million for rural development projects. $50 million in commodities to help improve Korea's halance-ofpayments position, $20 million for expansion of communication facilities and $20 million for development of export industries.

In return, Korea agreed to conclude this year a hilateral agreement for the protection of industrial patent rights and also to resume negotiations with Japan on a shipping agreement. Japan has long pressed for signing of the two accords.

Japan also promised to favor-ably consider Korea's request for a loan of $135 million to expand its integrated steel mill at Pohang doubling its annual production capacity to two million

Japan also promised to make efforts to narrow the perennial trade gap between the two countries favoring Japan, hy gradually easing its tariff and other trade barriers,

Near the end of the Aces' initial match against the talented Taiwanese team in the 1972 World Team Olympiad against Taiwan it seemed that the Aces might only collect one victory point. With two deals remaining they trailed by 16 international match points. The diagramed deal was then shown to the Vu-Graph audience, which was advised by the commentator that the Taiwanese players had had the best of matters in the closed

North had opened one club, strong and artificial, and East had overcalled one diamond. South did not have enough for a positive response in the part-nership style, and North decided to allow his opponents to play one diamond. East scrambled home with seven tricks, scoring 70 points on a deal on which North-South have a good chance of making four spades.

The question now was whether the Taiwanese North-South would reach four spades, and whether they would make it if they did. On the face of it, South has only

THE sixengths and idiosyn- identities in the f eracles evident in Sol Yurick's tem. He survives novels especially the overwhelming, exasperating, and unforget-table "The Bag"—are all here in this collection of 13 short stories The book begins with a brutal piece called "The Annealing," in which a young black woman's miscarriage is probably the least of the brutalities recorded. It ends with a curious fantasy of a communal birth, "And Not in Utter Nakedness . . ." Throughout, Yurick manages an easy relationship with his very contemporary, very urban and exotic subject matter; despite frequent explorations of soudid events, in

The most powerful stories in the collection could have sprung out of "The Bag": "The Annealing," in which a sour, life-hating woman psychiatrist has the power to "commit" an incorrigibly lifeloving black woman (who happens to be on welfare and is therefore subject to the whims and cruelties of the system); and "The Siege," in which another welfare recipient, an elderly woman is forced to surrender her "treasure house" of privacy to two welfare investigators. Yurick analyzes with commendable restraint the various tensions inevitable in any situation in which power resides in a few, and the many are both protected and victimized. His knowledge of the welfare system in America—what better metaphor for the craziest ossibilities of a "liberal" Establishment?—allows him to blend naturalism and fantasy in such a way that the human basis of his work is never lost or muddled.

The wasted energies, the crip-pled and aborted spirits of both "benefactor" and "client"! After 27 years of dependence upon welfare checks, the near-anonymous Mrs. D. of "The Siege" is dis-covered to be criminal in her fallure to indicate that she has an extra closet-sized room in her apartment: Two investigators show up, demanding to see the room: A pathetic siege follows, after which the aged, impoverished and totally doomed Mrs. D. is forced to reveal it—just a pas-sageway of dust and old scraps but to her "the core of her existence."

One of the investigators insists rules," when in fact he loathes Mrs. D. and the other "animals" dependent upon welfare checks The other man, a social worker understands the old woman's psychic martyrdom, and tries to explain that all human beings have secret rooms like Mrs. D.'s, "treasure house . . of psychic possibility." In the end, he too succumbs to the perverse excitament of the power game, and participates in the shameful that the property is her total struggle that results in her total

The fact is, these global elambakes have come to have an irresultible attraction as formus for ideological, social or racial expression. For this reason, they may have out-grown their britches. Perhaps in the future it will be advis-able to substitute separate world championships in swimming, track and field and so on, which could be conducted in a less hysterical climate.

"The disqualification of 16year-old Rick De Mont from the 1,500-meter freestyle swimming, in which he has shattered the Olympic record, slipped into the background. It may be unfor-tunate, for it appears that the boy was undone through the misfeasance of U.S. team officials and if it is so, the facts should be made public.

The United States party includes 168 coaches, trainers and other functionaries, which seems like enough to take care of 447 athletes. It wasn't enough, however, to get two world-record sprinters to the starting blocks for the 100meter dash, and it wasn't enough to reconcile young De Mont's asthma treatments with Olympic rules on drugs. ..

After the boy won the 400meter freestyle a urinalysis showed a trace of ephedrine, a medicine that helps clear nasal passages. A list of forhidden drugs, released before the Games, includes ephedrine. The fact that De Mont uses it for his asthma appears on his application sheet for the Games.

Why didn't the U.S. medical staff pick this up and maka sure there would be no viola-

Swimmer Loses Gold Over Drug IOC Disqualifies De Mont of U.S.

MUNICH, Sept. 6 (AP) .- The International Olympic Commit-tee today stripped the 400-meterfreestyle gold medal from 16year-old American swimmer Rick De Mont because he was taking a banned medication for an asthma condition.

De Mont, of San Rafael, Calif. won the 400-meter freestyle on Friday, and traces of the drug, ephedrine, were found in his urine samples taken after the victory. He had set an Olympic record with the time of 4:00.25. He was then banned from the finals of the 1,500-moter freestyle, an event in which he was the world record-holder.

Mrs. Monique Berlioux, an IOC director, said the championship will be declared vacant. Brad Cooper of Australia, who finished second, will get the silver medal awarded him after the race. Earlier this week Olympic officials had said the gold medal would go to Cooper if taken from De Mont. American Steve Genter was third in the race, and American Tom Mc-Breen was fourth.

The decision on whether to allow De Mont to keep his 400meter medal had been left to the Executive Board of the IOC, which ruled against him.

De Mont had been undergoing special drug tests under the super-vision of the IOC Medical Com-

He has taken a drug containing ephedrine-a drug specifically banned by IOC regulations-for many years for an asthma con-dition. De Mont used an ephedrine drug called Marax, a prescribed drug, that is taken by asthma sufferers to aid their

De Mont said he clearly listed the drug on his pre-Olympio forms. A. U.S. team official said at the time the swimmer was scratched from the 1,500-meter race that U.S. officials had failed to clear the drug with the IOC.

Prince Alexandre de Merode of the Medical Commission said that officials of other teams had taken up the question of the drug, and that all teams had been advised to substitute another medication, but that the Americans had failed to do so.

Also today, the Executive Board announced that the bronze medals won by the Dutch team in the 100-kilometer cycling race had been withdrawn.

The Dutch third-place team earlier had been suspended pend-ing investigation of doping charges against one of the team

Miss Evert Gains Tennis Semifinals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 6.

-Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., rallied for victory against Russian women's champion Olga Morozova today to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

After losing the opening set, the 17-year-old battled back to win the next two sets—the last in a tie-breaker—and take the match, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6. Down 5-6 in the third set.

Miss Evert fought back to hreak Miss Morozova's service to love in the 12th game and force a 9-point tie-breaker. In the pressure-packed tie-

"We're running out of time." I said. "Is there any other room you would like to show us?" There is the Red Room, where my 13-year-old son, David, holds his state receptions." She led me toward it, but when she opened the door she slammed it closed immediately. "If I've told that damn kid once I've told him a million times to clean on his room!"

"Well, are there any other rooms in the house we could visit?"

She looked at me funnily. What other rooms? That's all

The Saga of the Barbapapas (Cont'd.)

PARIS (IHT).—The Sturm and Drang States and Canada, Germany, Austria and of an impending new school year may Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Sweden and be tempered for some parents, faced with the problem of diverting their restless tots. the news that a fresh installment in the sage of the Barbapapas is about to come off the presses. What are Barba-papas? Well, it's hard to say, except that they are "different from other animals because they can change their shape." (If this sounds more incoherent than usual it's because I've had some difficulty in reading my notes after a long session with the Barbagrandpapa.)

So much for babytalk. What I'm trying to convey is that "Barbapapa'e New House the third in a series of refreshingly original children's books by Annette Tison and Talus Taylor, will be published this week in Paris and next week in London, Miss Tison is a young French artist and architect and Mr. Taylor is a young American ex-teacher of science and mathematics. "Barbapapa's New House" is part of the cornerstone of what looks like a new growth industry. The British firm of Pan Books is publishing its first Barbapapa paperback next year, and an international group of television networks and production units, including the British Broad-casting Corporation, France's ORTF and America's CBS, is closing ranks in "the biggest co-prodoction in the history of elevision"-2 series of 90 five-minute animated Barbapapa films in color. The TV venture is to begin late in 1973 or early in 1974. The films will be presented in daily episodes-five or perhaps six a week.

The Barbapapas in book form have already reared their mutable heads in many other parts of the world; the United

Denmark, Japan, the French-speaking countries of North Africa. Talus Taylor, a San Franciscan who settled in Paris about three years ago, talks matter-of-factly of hi, collaboration with Miss Tison, a team effort that, in about two years, has produced six extremely stylish for children—devoid of gore, scary char-acters, or crypto-pornography. In addition to the Barbapapa series there are three Tison-Taylor books embodying a gimmick transparent pages that combine with others to form new colors and unexpected objects. One of them, "Adventures of the Three Colors," won a top French book prize last year, was chosen as the "most original" children's book of 1971 at the Frankfurt Book Fair, and made the (U.S.) Publisher's Weekly list of the 25 best-selling children's books of the decade. In this one a transparent blue sea lion, for example, placed on top of a pink flamingo. produces (presto!) a purple turtle sitting. on the flamingo's back.

This book, like the others, was printed in Amsterdam. Firms elsewhere, Taylor says, "threw up their hands" when confronted with the huge technical problem of printing and hinding a book with com-posite pages in exact alignment, so that the dual forms and colors would appear in perfect "resister."

To return to the Barbapapa book "Bar-story is a housing problem. The setting could be anywhere, but it might well be Paris the Barbabables play with a pair of nonmutable children named François and Cindy. (On the other hand, there are seven Barbabables—far beyond the French norm: they'd be drawing a fortune in Allocations Familiales payments.) Barbababies are overflowing their little house. Eventually they find another one old and abandoned, but a veritable Gothic wedding-cake of a house encrusted with gables, turreted toyers and other such gingerbread. They move in happily, furnish it with flee-market-type stuff, and fix it up. Whereupon, of course, the neighbors. The Barbapapa family is offered a new apartment on a site that looks very much like the Tour Montparnasse area. They try it briefly but are unable to adjust to life in a concrete box and move to the suburbs, where the family hullds an arresting but functional house that looks like a chutch of Barbapapas—in repose they resemble overfed pears sitting alongside and atop each other. Everything was fine until . . . danger came to their home! In the distance they heard the hungry snap and chop of the wrecking machines!

developers arrive and begin knocking down

How President Nixon Kept His Golf Clubs 3in

President Nixon staged a holein-one golfing contest the other day at his private course at the San Clemente, California, White House with his set of clubs as the prize and about 100 newameoguests as contestants. Nixon still has his clubs. He introduced the event with a little reminiscence: "It was 11 years ago on Labor Day at Bel Air that I had a hole in one-my only one. It came on a 150-yard, par-3 hole and he used a 5 iron. Nixon set up his contest on a 140yarder and took the first shots. He used a 6 from. On his first attempt he shanked the ball into the ocean. Then he put four straight down the fairway, but short of the green; his swing was a little jerky. For the next 45 minutes one newsman after another tried for the coveted prize. The rules allowed three shots, but some contestants were so wild the President let them have a few extra tries. None succeed. ed and he added his golf cart as a prize, too. Still no winner, When Nixon bent down to adjust a hall for a contestant, another quipped: "You've got the most expensive candle in the
